HOME MATTERS.

A fire panic occurred in the Belleville papers last Saturday night. The alarm was caused by a smoking stove. No one was hurt, but scores were terribly excited.

The Grand Junction has done thirty thousand dollars worth more of business from June 1st to date than the corresponding period of last year.

Wednesday evening Mr. Kennedy, the Scotch seafarer, assisted by several members of his family, appears in Stirling, when we have no doubt will be greeted with a full house.

A man named John Ficket had his hand slightly crushed in the cogs of a separator, at the farm of James Welsh, two miles from Stirling, early Wednesday morning.

Father Farley celebrated mass at the R.C. Church, and afterwards delivered an excellent sermon, last Sunday. It is the intention of our Catholic friends to improve the interior of their church as soon as possible.

An Ottawa despatch says: Mr. J. White M.P., for East Hastings, and Mr. Robinson, M.P., for West Hastings, have had an interview with the Minister of Justice in relation to the appointment of a junior judge for the county.

Not only those to whom the old Scotch song is specially dear, but also those who love good vocal music will look forward with pleasure to the concert to be given by the celebrated Kennedy family in the Stirling Hall on Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Twenty-one Italian miners passed through this village last Tuesday, on their way to the celebrated Gold Mining Company's mines back of Marion. The company are making a great many improvements in their property.

In order to increase our circulation we make the following offer: To the parties who do not already take the News-Advertiser, we will furnish it to them from the present time, until Jan. 1, 1883 for only one dollar. Think of it; fourteen months of excellent reading for one dollar! Subscribe for us.

An old white horse, one of a team harnessed to a farm wagon, suddenly stopped to rest and laid calmly down in the mud, opposite Calder's jewelry store, and after enjoying a smoke for about half an hour, got up and trotted off as though he thought mad a very comfortable bed.

A mistake in the publication of the Rawdon township news, last week, would lead the reader to infer that 24 miles on the dollar had been paid for school purposes, when it was intended to read 24 miles for all township purposes, including the $600 for the Grand Junction debentures.

"And great was the fall thereof," and the fall was caused by a loose plank, as usual, on North street. Three young ladies, their way home from school, one day stopped to walk along the main street, when suddenly a plank turned a sharp corner, and they were thrown on their faces. Six shirts were barked and three hearts were sad.

St. John's church will be reopened next Friday, when several clergymen from Belleville and elsewhere will assist in the service. The church interior has been greatly improved and will present a very handsome appearance. Rev. T. H. Smith deserves great credit for the trouble he has been to in matter, and Mr. Wm. Mitchell has displayed excellent taste in the work done.

Twelve are printed in large, now by the Department of Railways for the construction of the Pacific railway from Esquimalt to Port Moody, 85 miles. See advertisement in another column.

It is as difficult to run a printing office without money as it is for a goose to fly without wings, therefore those knowing headmen intended to this establishment will greatly่อง by a settlement as soon as possible.

Last Monday evening Hartmann was least satisfied in the usual manner, and with a small amount of enthusiasm, by the small boy who takes advantage of the unscrupulous to indulge their propensity for mischief. In many cases birds, however, the summer months come to stay, and a few of a generally gaudy nature. This was a scaly gate in the city that was not taken from its hinges, and one or two merchants were treated to a supply of broken glass, broken plates and planks at their store doors.

There is so much freight conveyed over the Grand Junction railway at the present time, that delays are as common as trains upon the great passenger and freight railroads. The Belleville Advertiser says a few days ago when there is no freight train on the G.J., the passenger train isn't so long at Campbellford and Hastings to make load and unload freight that the passengers can get to town in time for the passenger train. This is not true for the passengers. It will not do for the road to try and be too saving.

Measures, Milne & Glate have filled up the new addition to their store with a large stock of books and sheets, more paper, more clerks, and are cutting a dash generally.

Mr. Thos. McCowan has a contract for grubbing the line for a new siding at the G.J. R. depot. He has eight men and boys working at it.

If you wish to see a bar that is a credit to any town in the province say "I do" a visit, at the Clark house and gaze around you. There are few saloons more tastefully arranged.

We have received the Worldly Budget, published at Peterborough, issue of short date, inclosed by 50c. It is weak as weak is its dwarf champion there will speedily be a collapse of the existing monachies.

Alec Rogers is a red hot grain buyer, and may be seen at all hours pursuing the farmers that he is the boss purchaser. D. McCauley secured a prize when he procured Alec's services.

Hunters are in their glory. Game is plentiful and easily reached. The birds of last summer, have caused the deer and bears to scatter on foodless ground.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

EVERY person should cultivate a nice sense of honor and self-respect.

It is not disgracful to say one who is poor to have a good education, or to exert one's self to escape poverty if it can be done.

Waging necessity ends courtesy begun; and no sooner are we supplied with every thing that nature can demand than we are soon compelled to make artificial appearance.

If men from their poverty would come from the sauntering harem, where some of them indeed feel a good part of their lives are passing away in idleness and pleasure; or recreation, they would find time enough to acquire dexterity and skill in hundreds of things of which defenseless females are ignorant.

SINCE the time of our ancestors people have not got to such as others. They are safe from reprobation, and have a right to live in their own way, but still better than those who have either never strayed, or who have failed in original composition.

COURTESY IN EVERY-DAY LIFE.—Have the course of your life a little while you have the money in your pocket, play at cards, go to the theater, or whatever may suit it; but do not let your honest eyes gaze at it.

Have the courage to be poor, and if it is necessary you should do so, and to hold on to your fortune if it prudent you should do so. Have the courage to be a friend in a "sooey" coat, even though you are in company with a rich one and richly attire him, and make him a man of a will and a just one.

Have the courage to tell a man why you do not land your money, and to tell him why you do not respect him in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest duplicitous, by which you have been compelled to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones. Have the courage to obey your Master, and to be a good man.

It is the courage to prefer comfort and prosperity to fashion in all things.

Wants.

A witty society woman was standing before Zola's highly-painted picture of "Lo and His Daughters." "Oh, I am a ruined wife," said she, "and my husband is lost. What thought when he beheld his poor wife turned to a pillar of salt?" "I suppose," replied the hostess, "he thought that she had given birth to a son."

The last time I saw Miss Z., she was a blushing, speaking of well-known adjectives to a witty dramatist, who was a man of great personal impressiveness, and her personal impressions against the lady, as having been instrumental, though maybe not so strong as she imagined, in causing the expression of her face, which I had before remarked, though not so strongly as she did, to be like a mask of death.

"That could scarcely be true," replied Tom; "she has been at Atheling for some considerable time."

"There is some mystery there," said Mr. Silverton. "She is at once at home and abroad; and he must, I fear, be long since dead; and for years I have diligently sought to find the secret of her disappearance."

TOM'S WIFE.

CHAPTER IV.

It was with a strange sense of something unexpected going to happen, that on Friday morning I a lighted at the door of the Atheling Inn, and found the Square there.

The Square was there, received me with a degree of cordiality that I never before had seen in him, and I was glad to see that he was the jester with whom I had often heard his father speak of as one of his earliest friends.

And he looked on a green hillside.

"Two rings still in their peaceful rest."

He was smiling, and looking down on the children, his bright eyes and mirthful smile.

A rainbow bridging our darkness of skies,

A rainbow round of colors from 3 to year.

"I feel all the more at ease," said he.

Then, in my younger days, I joined with other members of my family in repudiating a bachelor who had married, as we then said, a widow.

Mrs. Favre, and her maid along with her, were there also; and she returned my bow with a smile, and a look of interest, and a slight raising of her eyebrows, as she was already out of the house.

"I could not help being sorry for her," said I, "but I could not help making a bad impression at the door of your poor husband's home."

Her face was very pale, and her eyes were dimmed with tears.

"She is a woman of the world," said I, "and she is a woman of the world."

It was a time when she sifted the truth."

Madame Favre, and her maid along with her, were there also; and she returned my bow with a smile, and a look of interest, and a slight raising of her eyebrows, as she was already out of the house.

"I could not help being sorry for her," said I, "but I could not help making a bad impression at the door of your poor husband's home."

Prepotency of Percheron Horses.

It is claimed by high authority that Percherons are the most perfect of domestic animals, are capable of performing a greater amount of quick, heavy work, are more tractable and easily broken than any other breed of horses, and are the truest and the produce of Percheron stallions, partaken in a greater degree of the qualities of their dams, and are the best horses for the higher prices on the market than those from any other of the larger breeds. These are the reasons why they are popular with the public. It is well known that all of the Irish where draft horses are raised, the French people are the ones who have a prepotency of breeding from sires and dams both developed physically to the highest degree, and as far as the Percheron is concerned, their progeny would be called upon to partake of these qualities.

We were shown, Saturday last, a bunch of apple leaves fresh and green, which Mr. J. D. Patterson had secured on his farm in the 6 1/2 acre of soil the day before. Speak about Canada being a cold country when the fruit trees are green during the latter part of November!

Mr. E. Horwitz' impression having gone abroad that my brother, James W. Bailey, is the person referred to in your item last week desirous an appeal to stand before Mr. Calder's shop, I respectfully ask permission to state that he was not in Stirling on the day in question, and knew nothing of the incident until THE NEWS arrived. Yours, etc., A. H. BAILEY.

If the lady happens to overestimate her weight it isn't a sin as it is for the benefit of the church.
